LOUISVILLE, KY., Jan. 15, 1885.

tor Maxey, Washington, D. C .: Dear Sir.—I feel constrained to address you this letter, expressive of my thanks for your position and remarks in the Senate upon the bill to place General Grant on the retired list of the army. I was particularly struck with your formible presentation of the feet our foreible presentation of the fact hat when the supreme hour came to he southern States and they had to ield up their most cherished opes and abandon their struggle, man ever acted with more nity and generous sensibility than neral Grant. At that time, immedi-General Grant was the most con icuous man in the country. His one, not excepting the President. often thought of the debt of gratitude the country owes to General Grant that he was just the man he was at that hom-clear-sighted, resolute, and imbued with the sentiments exactly danted to the emergency.

I was at that time, as you know, it Cabinet of President Johnson, and in my capacity as Attorney-General a case came before me very soon after the surrender at Appointtox, which I will relate. General Bradley T. Johnson, of the Confederate army, was at that surrender, and received there a military parole. With that in his possession, he was arrested and imprisoned at Balti more, he being under an indictment for treason. He addressed a letter to General Grant from prison, inclosing his parole. Upon receipt of it General Grant once wrote to the President a most ositive and emphatic letter, demandng the discharge and release of General hnson. The letter, while respectful, was most determined. It took the ground, afterward fully established, that the military paroles were not to be violated by civil arrests. President Johnson, however, was not disposed to acquiesce. He laid the matter before me for an opinion. I saw the difficulty presented by the legal aspect of the case, and proposed that I would avoid it if possible by consultation with General Grant. I found General Grant in his office, and spoke of the legal difficulties, and suggested that he withdraw the letter he had addressed to the President, and asked that a pardon be issued to General Johnson. which would solve the difficulty. he positively refused to do, if it in any way yielded the position taken by him that his paroles were to be respected. He expressed his unalterable determination that they should not be violated. Said he "That is the way General Lee and I understood it at the time, and I will be drawn and quartered before they shall be violated." He added that he would take the same stand in every case that might arise. He agreed to write the pared at once and signed by the Presiing for General Grant which you so admirably express in your speech in the And not only in the particu-Senate. And not only in the particular I have mentioned, but in many others also. The other portions of our now united country can never fail to remember him as the strong arm of its power in the great struggle. General Grant left the army at the call of his country. His two administrations were in times of excitement and distraction incident to the vast disruptions of war. He should have been restored to the army years ago. He certainly should be now. In my judgment, military men who perform great and nota-ble service should be suitably rewarded and honored. I sincerely trust the House will promptly pass the bill, and and that it will become a law. It seems to me but justice, and, I may add, tardy justice. I am, sir, most respectfully,

JAMES SPEED. P. S .- I should add that President Johnson, while questioning the legality of the parole as a civil pardon, had no hesitation in granting the Executive par-

DRIVEN FROM THE CHAIR. How Connecticut Legislators Worried A Hartford (Conn.) special says There has been a good deal of fun in the Connecticut House of Representatives for two days past. In the absence of Speaker Simonds, detained at home by sickness, the House on Tuesday balloted for a Speaker pro tem. Last week Mr. is designated, under the rule, Mr. Frisbie, of Farmington, to preside, but a temporary appointment was for only two days, and in the further absence of the Speaker it was thought best for the House to elect. It was generally conceded that Mr. Frisbie would be elected by the Republican majority, and he himself naturally expected the House would continue him in the posi-But quiet work was done for Clark, of Haddam, who has no Mr. Clark, of Haddam, who has no special qualifications for the place, and a good many Republicans consented to vote for him, more as a joke than anything else. Meanwhile Mr. Davis, of Haddam, who was a member of the House last year, and is a well-known Democratic politician, went systematically to work on the Democratic side, and got promises of votes for Clark. other equally important office. That move would tend to weaken Mahone in Virginia (a thing greatly to be deand got promises of votes for Clark, who is a strong Republican, but is in business with Davis. It was a family sired by all white men living in Demo cratic States). To see hundreds of affair between the two. The ballot gave Clark a strong lead, and he was colored voters from Virginia rushing to Ohio, Kansas, Vermont, and other solid elected, the result greatly surprising Mr. Frisbie and his friends. Yesterday Republican States, in order to have a Republican States, in order to have a chance of filling, to the gratification of the white Republican people of such States, high Federal offices, would prove doubtless as pleasing to the real tax-paying people of Virginia as it would to the Republican white people of the States. there appeared to be a disposition to worry Clark, and parliamentary ques-tions were raised till the House became a perfect bedlam. Clark got red in the face, and, rapping with his gavel, declared every motion made to be out of order. Finally the Clerk straightened him out by dictating what he should say, and this parrot performance was so entertaining that senators from the other end of the Capitol were hurried in to see the fun. To-day another raid on the Speaker was planned, but he had enough of it yesterday, and retreated. Mr. Troup, of New Haven, raised a point of order as a preliminary move, when Clark immediately called Mr. Joslyn (Democrat), of Hartford, to the chair, and left in disgust. This retreat caused Mr. Troup to withdraw his point of order, and to remark that it was the first a perfect bedlam. Clark got red in the

me in the history of the Cou Legislature, that a Speaker had run away from the chair to avoid ruling on a point of order. The placing of Mr. Joslyn, who was the Democratic nomi-nee for Speaker, in the chair in the first Joslyn, who was the Pensorate hominee for Speaker, in the chair in the first place would have been an act of courtesy which would have prevented the ridiculous proceedings of the past two sessions of the House. Both houses have adjourned to next Tuesday, and have voted not to receive any new business after February 6th.

OF THE PACAS OF WYE.

A Centreville dispatch to the Bulti-more Sun says: "Wye Hail," the home of the Paca family, on Wye Island, Queen Anne's county, was sold at auction in front of the court-house here to-day. It was purchased by Jo-seph Rasin, of Chestertown, whose wife is the daughter of the late William B. Paca, the last owner of the estate. The price paid is $29,745.35. The property comprises 363 acres, and is part of an extensive tract which has been in possession of the Pacas fer generations. It was owned prior to the Revolution by William Paca, the distinguished statesman and signer of the Declaration of Independence. The estate forms part of an island in the picturesque Wye river of some 2,700 acres, and became the property of Mr. Paca upon his marriage The estate forms part of an with Miss Chew, who was joint owner of the island with her sister, the wife of the distinguished jurist, John Beale Bordley. The sisters were descendants of Henrietta Maria Neale, who is said to have been "god-daughter, namesake, and maid of honor" to Queen Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles I. of England.

On the property obtained through his wife William Paca erected a splendid mansion for his son, John P. Paca. This building was one of the finest spe-cimens of colonial architecture to be found in Maryland, but was destroyed by fire on the 3d of February, 1879, while some workmen were making repairs to the roof. On the mainland, not far away, was another "Wye Hall," the home of the Tilghmans, and afterwards of the Pacas, where, in March, 1865, was enacted the tragedy which was the forerunner of a series of disasters affecting the Paca family. The tragedy referred to was the killing of William B. Paca's nephew, John B. Paca, a lad about nineteen years old, and the latter's uncle on the mother's side, Mr. Alfred Jones. Four members of the family have since died suddenly.

The property, which has just been sold, belonged to the heirs of William B. Paca, and the sale was necessary in order to make a partition of the pro

South recognize the fact we have stated. The Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, of tice that they can't always stop the course, will receive the thanks of the best people of the South for what it printed on the subject, and such precious stone, that hasn't any legs, or might arise. He agreed to write the letter I proposed asking the pardon. I it is to be supposed will great-said I would send for it. He said, ly please and gratify the white smuggling of Chinamen, who can run like Indians, and are as smart as action, if taken by Mr. Cleveland, said I would send for it. He said,

It expressed his fixed determination to have his paroles observed, and from that time the law was settled that they were such an era of good feeling as existed was on duty watching the stragglers, to be respected. I had the pardon prewhen Mr. Monroe was President of the United States? Old people will rememdent, and General Johnson was discharged.

Thus the southern people, through their military leaders in the late war, have cause to entertain the kindly feelfeat, seems to have "dug up," and afterwards handed to General Sherman long time, and finally called out to him : (to be aided by his cold-blooded brother John) to wave, it seems to me is what patriots North and South should desire above all earthly things. As a wooldyed believer in the gamest man (Jefferson Davis) that our late war between the States brought forth, and while I do not believe that the negro is in any (true) sense the equal of the white man, yet if such a course will bring restored peace to the country I am strongly in favor of Mr. Cleveland's appointing negroes to fill responsible places in solid Republican States when such action will prove greatly pleasing to the white Republicans of such States. Of course such action would be also very gratifying not only to Chinaman was about to go, he said, the negroes living in such States, but to the millions of the same color and race living in the southern States. in their true colors the white renegades of the South, who have for years fooled the negroes by getting them to bestow on such white renegades all offices that were worth the trouble of asking for. Men of the North who have so long clamored that the white Democrats of the South should, spite of such renegades as Mahone, aided by Mr. Arthur, elect ignorant negroes to fill high places, will, in the very nature of things, rejoice that in solid Republican States there is a prospect that intelligent, educated ne-groes, who never knew what it was to be a slave, shall fill high offices. If the doing of such a thing as that will once more unite our whole country, as it was united when Mr. Monroe was President, I, for one, will thank God that such a simple course will bring about such a grand result. I therefore pray you to keep prominent before Mr. Cleveland the policy of his giving to the "solid" Repub-lican States just as many negro office-holders as a decent regard for the public service will permit. If it gets out in time that such a course will be pursued by Cleveland, who can tell how many negroes now in Virginia will emigrate before the next election to such States in order to have a chance of being appointed a judge or to some merit as a story-teller, he receives well- lice.

SKIPPING OVER THE BORDER.

After witnessing the sights daily to be seen in the city cemetery here, writes a San Francisco correspondent of the New York Sun, one would not suppose that the woods along the interna-tional boundary between Washington Territory and British Columbia were full of Chinamen looking wistfully southward, and ready at any moment to step across the line when the backs of the revenue-officers and other guards are turned. In this city the regular annual shipment of the bones of the celestial dead to China is now in progress. From all points on the northwestern frontier come reports of China-men running the blockade.

As soon as winter settled down upon the British possessions hundreds of Chinamen who had been at work up there in one capacity or another came down to Victoria to see what the chance was of slipping into the United States. Many owners of sloops, yawls, and sail-boats living near Puget Sound drove a profitable business with the heathens in transporting them safely to American soil. A revenue cutter has been on the watch for these smugglers for a long time, but they frequently cluded its vigilance. The Chinese invariably have money, and for the sake of reaching the States they will pay liberally. Sloop-owners have been subjected to many searches, and in some cases Chinamen have been found and turned back, but many have got through. Three or four women are among the number smuggled in and promptly sold by the men respon-sible for their introduction here.

During last fall the casualties in this surreptitious trade were numerous. Several boats were swamped and their occupants drowned, and in two or three instances Chinamen who bought yawls at exorbitant rates and undertook to navigate them were never heard of afterward. Finding the route by way of Puget sound not only expensive, but dangerous, the Chinamen are now going inland and scooting across the line at every opportunity. Shot-gun quaran-tines have proved effective in some instances, but the extent of territory is so great that nothing can prevent a Chinaman from getting across if he is smart. The city marshal of Whatcom, Washington Territory, says:

"They are slicker than silk. They come right over when they feel like it, and you can't stop them. After they've been here fifteen minutes you can't tell one from another, and they all swear that they have lived in this country twenty years. I nailed one fellow almost in the act of coming over the boundary the other day, but he lied me clear back to my office, and I couldn't prove anything on him. We have Chinaman here in Whatcom who has been here a long time, and who manages to give his brethren a good deal of help. When they slide in they turn up at his place sooner or Cleveland to be President of the United | later, and he introduces them around as States, the article you printed in your from San F'lisco, just out on a little ssue of the 22d instant (headed as tour. The Chinaman took to his heels in terror, but there is no doubt about his

getting across the line somewhere before

Good judges estimate that not less than 500 Chinamen have unlawfully come across the line in the last two months, and it may be that the number is much greater. It is certain that i will be largely increased before spring and that for some years to come the Mongolians will find comparatively easy access to the country in this way, in spite of the laws passed for the purpose of excluding them.

About the middle of last month Ah

Sam, a hard-working Chinaman, took a contract from the Chinese Six Companie to disinter and prepare for shipment to the Orient the bones of the Chinese temporarily laid in the city cem-eteries. He began work with a gang of Mongolians on the 17th ultimo, and up to the present time has removed about two hundred bodies. Every Chinaman coming here in the service of the Six Companies receives a guarantee that if he should die his bones will be sent home for burial, and this agreement is most scrupulously observed. Where Chinamen die without having made any such contract with the companies their friends see to it that their remains are sent home in due time. Ah Sam has with him in his present undertaking several women as well as men, and the bodies are plundered of everything of value. Every Chinaman is buried with a coin of some kind in his mouth. The women who assist Ah Sam take this piece of money as their reward.

The Jacob Grimm Centenary.

The centenary of the birth of Jacob Grimm, the great German story-teller, whose works are at present accessible to every child taught to read and write in the whole civilized world, has called forth a burst of enthusiasm throughout Germany, which is loudly echoed by the press. Jacob Grimms is the name which catches the eye in every news-paper in the Fatherland which is not entirely devoted to colonial questions. The Kolnische Zeitung gives expres-sion to its feelings of gratitude in a long article, in which, besides Grimm's. The hall was finally cleared by the po-

"He descended into the deep mine of German nationality, German language, and German folk-lore, and what he saw there he taught himself and his people to love—namely, German depth of feeling and German power of intellect." A Grimm monument, to be erected in his birth-place, Hanau, is to be the outcome of the festivities, which have been held wherever the German tongue is held wherever the German tongue i

CONFESSING A CRIME.

How a Farmer and His Wife Were Killed

A Crawfordville (Ind.) special says James Coffee, the young man who last week confessed that he alone murdered farmer McMullen and wife in Coal-Creek township, made another confes-sion last night in which he implicates a man named James Dennis. confession is as follows: "I first said I killed McMullen and wife to save my neck from the meb, as I thought by acknowledging it they would consent to allow the court to hang me. I now say that I did not commit the crime; that it was James Dennis. He and I were at a neighbor's house the night of the murder, and I went away first. I stood guard at McMullen's door, and Jim went in and killed the man. Then I went in, and we got $43. We then pulled his wife out to the gate, and Jim said I must kill her; that he had killed the man. I told him I did not have the nerve te do it, but he insisted, saying that he had killed the man and I must kill her. I then struck her one or two blows with the hickory club that we made espe-cially for the killing. We then carried her in on the bed. She was not dead, but we fired the house and left them to burn, both bodies being almost entirely burned up."

During their vacation last autumn these gentlemen found themselves in Inverness. While going about the town they noticed that they were followed everywhere by a beautiful spaniel, of which WANTED, TO SELL PRIVATEat first they took no notice. Attracted, however, by the animal's persistence, they looked closely at it, and found that round its neck was a small padlocked box, with an inscription asking for alms for some poor schools. The professors are assured that the dog recognized them as tourists by their clothes, and as therefore likely to give willingly. However this may be, M. Fontaine drew a penny from his pocket and was about to put it in the box : but the dog prevented this by holding its head down over the opening, and, seizing the coin in its mouth with great quickness, ran away. A few minutes later they passed a baker's shop and saw their collecting friend seated on the counter, and apparently enjoying to its heart's seemed to the editor of the Revue Scientifique to need confirmation, which was supplied by the following terse note from Professor Porchon, the other witness: "I add my evidence with much pleasure to that of my friend M. How very human! Almost Dead from Inhaling Gas. A Reading (Penn.) special says: The female clerks employed in the Prudential Insurance Company's office, on the second floor of J. W. To his horror the room was full of gas, and Mr. Tryon was sitting on his chair, apparently lifeless, with his head on his hands and his elbows on the table, immediately under an argand burner. The gas was turned on full. and a newspaper was placed over the top to prevent its escape upward. This was at 2 o'clock. Physicians were summoned, who endeavored to produce artificial respiration. After laboring two hours with him Mr. Tryon breathed spasmodically and very heavily. He was conveyed to his home in a cab, and the physicians express the opinion that he cannot recover. What the motive was for Mr. Tryon's action can only be conjectured. Financial troubles are alleged to have been at the bottom of the Shot Himself on His Daughter's Grave. A Meadville (Pa.) special of the 22d says: John T. O'Keefe, aged thirty years, was found dead this morning in the Catholic cemetery, northeast of the city, with a bullet-hole through his heart. He was a resident of Olean, N. Y., and came to the city yesterday with his father, who resides here. His daughter died about three years ago in Bradford, and the remains were interred in Meadville. The general opinion s that O'Keefe became deranged through grief at the loss of his child and shot himself. He left his father yesterday, saying that he was going to his daughter's grave, and this was the last seen of him until his body was found cold in death lying upon the grave of his child. An empty revolver found beside him told the sad story of self-destruction.

A Cinder-Pot Bursts with Fearful Effect.

A cinder-pot in the Baltimore Ohio rolling-mill, Cumberland, Md., burst about 11 o'clock Thursday morning, severely burning William Robinson, assistant superintendent of the mill, and Richard Rowley, a boss roller, both of whom have been employed in the mill for some years, drawing the highest wages. Robinson is a son of William Robinson, of Baltimore, the superintendent of the mill, and is burned about the head, face, and back. His clothing was almost burned off. Rowley was burned on the face and chest. Both men are suffering intense pain, but will recover. They were conveyed to their homes soon afte the accident.
